

Precious Delegates of the 8th HHHSMUN FAO,

Welcome to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations. It is my absolute pleasure being given the opportunity to be a guide of yours, a friend, a trainer, and hopefully a long life colleague. MUN season is right around the corner, and I am ready to watch you evolve. Knowing that MUN has been a huge part of my life, it is a goal of mine to show you how much I value it.

To begin with, I am 15 years old and I have attended more than 8 conferences. Within each and every conference, I strive for the better. I strive to know more, to learn more, to accomplish more, and most importantly I strive for improvement.

As the president of the FAO, I am taking the full responsibility to encourage each and every delegate to get over their fear and to excel. I can perfectly recall my first conference and remember the challenges that I have faced. In other words, I am fully aware of the challenges that delegates can face. For that reason, my goals for this year revolve around strengthening each and every delegate's leadership skills, social skills, and most importantly their political involvement in the global society. However, the topic being tackled, which is "Climate Change and Natural Hazards", can vastly strengthen your involvement in this society knowing that Lebanon itself is affected by the change of the weather. and

Moreover, I assure you that this experience and this conference will immensely broaden your horizons. With that being said, you'll mingle and meet new people with different backgrounds and perspectives. Besides that, being an active member is a fortune that opens doors for everyone. You'll become acquainted with global issues that will extend your knowledge on a personal level. The dais members of this committee have worked hard to ensure that the guide is clear; however, don't depend solely on it. Research the topic thoroughly and deeply as it is very recent and important!

Lastly, if you have any inquiries regarding the flow of debate, the topic itself, or anything in general, gladly contact me whenever you like. I wish all of you the best of luck. I hope this experience makes a difference within your personality and performance in the future.

With love,

Your motivated President

Haneen Kawash
